CAAG    City of London Anti-Apartheid Group    1980-1994

Name of Creator: City of London Anti-Apartheid Group

Extent: 28 boxes, 109 posters, 21 banners, 11 items of clothing and 2 over-sized items

Administrative/Biographical History: The City of London Anti-Apartheid Group was formed in 1982 by Norma Kitson, an exile from South Africa. Initially the group was recognised as being a local group of the Anti-Apartheid Movement, however by 1986 the group had become 'disaffiliated' from the national anti-apartheid movement.

The group mainly held protests and demonstrations outside the South African embassy in Trafalgar Square, London, and publicly fought for the right to protest there. Arguably, the most notable demonstration was the 'Non-Stop Picket' of the South African embassy which was launched in April 1986, and expect for a temporary ban in 1987, it continued until 1990. The picket called for the release of Nelson Mandela and other political prisoners.

The City of London Anti-Apartheid Group also held 'trolley protests' against the sale of South African goods in supermarkets across the UK. This protest was aligned with the group's call for the British to impose sanctions on South African goods. The City of London Anti-Apartheid Group also organised frequent occupations of the South African Airways office in Oxford Circus in London as part of their 'No Rights, No Flights' campaign. The group also campaigned for free elections to be held in South Africa, which finally happened in 1994.

In 1992 the group organised demonstrations against the Springbok rugby tour of Britain, and held demonstrations against apartheid in sport at other sporting events in the UK.

The group also contributed towards the development and functions of campaigns to help South African political prisoners, such as the Upington 14 and the Sharpeville 6. It also shared solidarity with anti-apartheid groups based in South Africa, often asking associated individuals to participate in City of London Anti-Apartheid Group demonstrations and pickets. The group also supported other UK and international solidarity movements, and shread a relationship with Fight Racism! Fight Imperialism and the Revolutionary Communist Group.
