Name of creator: Gordon Rainsford (b. 1960) photographer

Extent: 21 boxes

Administrative/biographical history: Gordon Rainsford was born in Kenya in 1960 but moved to London when he left school. Initially wanting to be an accountant, he soon changed his mind and took a degree in Sociology at the London School of Economics. Later, he worked in catering for a while before becoming a freelance photographer for twenty years.

Gordon's work as a freelance photographer has left an unparalleled document of LGBTQ+ Britain between 1985 and 2005, providing images for all of the major publications at the time, including The Pink Paper, Capital Gay and many others. He was present at every Pride, photographed the protests of Outrage! and ACT UP London, as well as attending the vigils for those lost during the HIV/AIDS crisis. Gordon also photographed most of the nightclubs, pubs and social events attended by the community at this time, along with documenting organisations such as the Terrence Higgins Trust, Switchboard and Stonewall. He also took portraits of prominent figures in the community involved in arts, politics, culture and showbusiness.

'Jeremy Joseph, DJ at the Royal Oak in Hammersmith, Capital Gay readers' DJ of the year, has devised a game show called "The Wheel of Misfortune" which involves contestants failing to guess the answers to bad taste jokes asked by Jeremy and then having to do a revolting messy stunt as a forfeit, helped by Jeremy's assistant Mandy. On April Fool's Day, contestants Laurence - a P.T. instructor (with head in bowl), Nick - a prostitute, and Lorraine - bar tender at the Royal Oak, had to fish out condoms, cock rings, and tampons from bowls of tomato sauce, custard, and flour with their teeth. Lorraine had to stand in wellingtons filled with baked beans and jelly, and all of them had eggs cracked on their heads. Laurence won with 41 points according to an unfathomable scoring system Lorraine had 34 and Nick 24. All three went home with signed wooden spoons having thoroughly enjoyed wallowing in muck, and having appalled and entertained the large audience'
