Administrative/Biographical History: Terry Higgins was one of the first people in the UK to die of an AIDS-related illness. He died aged 37 on 4 July 1982 at St Thomas' Hospital, London. By naming the trust after Terry, the founder members – his partner and friends – hoped to personalise and humanise AIDS in a very public way, at a time when the virus attracted only fear, hostility and ignorance.

Established with the intention of preventing others from having to suffer as Terry had, from the outset THT focused on raising funds for research and awareness of the illness that was then called 'Gay-Related Immune Deficiency' (GRID) and had only been identified the previous year. A public meeting about GRID organised by London Lesbian and Gay Switchboard and THT brought together a small group of committed volunteers from a range of backgrounds. This included Tony Whitehead, who went on to become the first Chair of the Trust's steering committee.

In August 1983, the Trust was reborn as a formal organisation, Terrence Higgins Trust, with a constitution and a bank account. By November the Trust was a limited company with a Board of Directors, and by January 1984 it had gained charitable status. THT provided direct services immediately, including buddying/home-help, counselling, drug education and sex education. The first charity in the UK to be set up in response to the HIV epidemic, the largest in Europe and generally considered the UK's leading HIV and AIDS charity, now for over 40 years it has been at the forefront of the fight against HIV and AIDS, mounting hundreds of health campaigns and raising funds and awareness.
