This is the Muster Roll of the men who entered their names at Salisbury Street, London, as desirous of going out to Italy. All the persons whose names are here did not go out, and many whose names were never entered here did go. The great majority of those whose names appear here went. No Muster Roll of the men who actually landed in Naples was ever sent to England, though frequently demanded by me. Only Col Peard can furnish the accurate list. As far as I have been able to identify the names upon the present list of men who actually went to Italy; I have underlined such names with red ink. The names of the men who returned to London (and who received payment from the London ^{Committee} at the request of the Sardinian Government were kept as far as possible); and in by these means numerous names have been identified and underlined accordingly; but in the great haste in which the men were paid, to enable them to leave by special railway trains, prevented in some cases duplicates of their names being taken. The Italian Consulate in London possess the only accurate list of these men and they have not been able to supply to me a perfect copy.

The names of the officers were never inserted in the Muster Roll. I have gathered some names from the newspaper reports from Italy; but no perfect list of the actual officers: and no list of the rank subsequently held in the Legion by the men whose names are here recorded; was ever in possession of the London Committee. Neither Col Peard nor his military Secretary "Lord Seymour" ever supplied the Committee in London with any list of the killed, wounded, or sick. If any list of the actual men who landed in Naples and of the killed, wounded and casualties ever existed, it must be sought for at the hand of Col Peard or the authorities with whom his papers may be deposited in Naples.
